Where it comes from is totally unknown. But it is known that it uses a complex language, in some way with others of the same species. What makes it a conscious creature

It is believed that this creature could have appeared after the attempt of a Second Conjunction of the Spheres in 1272.

Physiology

It is a humanoid creature, with the appearance of an insect and enormous wings, which reminds us of a moth as its name indicates. It has a completely dark body and red eyes of a very powerful color. It is believed that its eyes allow it to see in the dark and in other different spectra.

It has a wide mouth and many fangs. In addition to a sort of tongue, which allows it to suction different things (Like blood, for example)

First reports

The first sightings of this creature were at Angren. Specifically, by several villagers in the area, whom the creature attacked, taking their cattle.

They hired the witcher Rouge, who could confirm that it was an unknown creature and not a vampire, like the villagers said before he hunted it.

Subsequently, it would be seen in other parts of the Continent, such as in Zerrikania or Melukka. In addition to being reported by the Fabio Sachs expedition on its first incursion into the Western Continent.
